

A Presidential Team.

We have all heard of the farmer's boy who yoked the zebra, escaped from a neighboring man, with the old farm horse, and set them ploughing. Master Zebra kicked poor Dobbin until he died—the boy ran away—and finally the plough, dangling at the heels of the striped beast, brought him low upon the turf, and the ploughing came to an end.

The farmer boys of the Philadelphia convention yoked "Zebra, Donelson" and old farm horse "Fillmore" to do the ploughing with the same want of foresight. As in the story, the Merry-Andrew of the ticket will kill the old Dobbin, and the concern itself in turn put the former by the heels, and the ploughing of the Union will never be done except by the sturdy democratic team.

It so happens that the would-be Vice was once editor of the Washington Union. It so happens that there are some men who file the "Union," as there are some readers of congressional documents who keep them snugly in musty libraries; and so it comes out that the former attacks of Editor Donelson upon President Fillmore are likely to be republished, to the shame and confusion of the Philadelphia gentlemen who so hastily yoked them together.

The zebra of the concern is already kicking and plunging vehemently. He has kicked in the Tabernacle and in Philadelphia, and is on his route southward, and westward, plunging into the rhetoric as he goes. Shortly he will bring up at the Hermitage, and imitating Louis Napoleon, who delights in being the nephew of his uncle, Andrew Jackson Donelson will feel most self-complacent in being the nephew of his aunt. He was the relative of Mrs. Jackson, and his first names are those of adoption. Thus, at the very start, he is the bogus representative of the old chief tain's honors.

Mr. Fillmore, when last heard from, was on his way to the Holy Land, where his friends are expected to address him. That will be an auspicious place for him to receive the news of his nomination. By the tomb of Pharaoh, he can muse upon fallen greatness; by the waters of the Dead Sea, he can think of the bitterness of political strife; gazing upon the promised land, he can speculate on his slender hopes; and near the village of Bethany, he can look to the northward, and ask with Judge Capron, "Is there no balm in Gilead?" Bethany will be a good place for President Fillmore to bring up at, since, according to ancient maps, it is the "other side of Jordan."

Our Washington correspondent gives some items touching the team which is to do the ploughing for the country. We have no doubt he is right. James Buchanan and General Thomas J. Rusk, of Texas, are scarcely to be placed in the same field with the zebra and the old Dobbin.—N. Y. Times and Messenger.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE OF JOHN HANCOCK.—One who saw Hancock in June, 1782, relates that he had the appearance of advanced age. He had been repeatedly and severely afflicted with gout, probably owing in part to the custom of drinking punch—a common practice in high circles in those days. As recollected at this time, Hancock was nearly six feet in height and of thin person, stooping a little, and apparently enfeebled by disease. His manners were very gracious, of the old style, a dignified complaisance. His face had been very handsome. Dress was adapted quite as much to the ornamental as useful. Gentlemen wore wigs when abroad, and common caps when at home. At this time, about noon, Hancock was dressed in a red velvet cap, within which was one of fine linen. This latter was turned up over the lower edge of the velvet one, two or three inches. He wore a blue damask gown lined with silk, a white satin embroidered waistcoat, black satin small clothes, white silk stockings and red morocco slippers. It was a general practice in genteel families to have a talkard of punch made in the morning and placed in a cooler when the season required it. At this visit, Hancock took from the cooler standing on the hearth a full tankard, and drank first himself, and then offered it to those present. His equippage was splendid, and such as is not customary at this day. His apparel was sumptuously embroidered with gold, silver, lace, and other decorations fashionable among men of fortune of that period; and he rode especially upon public occasions, with six beautiful bay horses, attended by servants in liveries. He wore a scarlet coat, with ruffles on his sleeves, which soon became the prevailing fashion; and it is related of Dr. Nathan Jacques, the famous pedagogue of West Newbury, that he passed all the way from that place to Boston in one day to procure cloth for a coat like that of John Hancock, and returned with it under his arm, on foot.

TREATMENT OF SCARLET FEVER.—As the scarlet fever is very prevalent at present, it may be of great benefit to many persons to publish two simple methods of treatment for the disease in its earlier stages. The one is to rub the entire body of the sick with a soft lubricating substance—a piece of fat pork has been used for this purpose. It is stated that it softens the skin, opens its pores, and produces a soothing influence on the patient.

The other plan is to dissolve some saleratus in warm water, (about one-fourth of an ounce to the quart,) and bathe the patient's body with this, at a milk heat. A soft sponge is employed in bathing the body, and a soft towel used for drying. This operation should be done rapidly in a comfortably warm apartment, and the patient placed in bed as soon as possible afterwards.

The alkaline solution, it is stated, removes scurf from the skin, softens it, and promotes perspiration. Both methods, to our knowledge, have been tried with good results; but we do not present them as any substitutes for any method of treatment practiced by physicians; the throat affection—the most dangerous connected with the disease—must be treated locally for itself.—Scientific American.

The Madison (Wisconsin) Journal gives the following medical item, which is worth being noted down in this place: "We are informed by Dr. Ward that the child of Mr. White, which was bitten by a rattlesnake last week, has recovered. The remedy used was so simple and attainable by every one, that it ought to be generally known. The hand which was bitten and the arm were enveloped in a poultice of moistened ashes, and the child made to drink freely of whiskey-punch."

Wadsworth's Rifle vs. Wm. Tell's Bow.—The following instance of daring sport is related in the Albany Transcript: "The feat in shooting performed by Tell, in shooting an apple off the head of his son, has been told over and over again, and is as familiar as household words, and a wonderful piece of execution, close calculation and great daring. Something similar was attempted and successfully performed in the village of Pittstown, Rensselaer County, about a week since. The circumstance was related to us as follows: "There had been a turkey shoot at which several 'crack shots' had assisted; after the shoot was over the crowd adjourned to the tavern; numerous drinks were called for and put out of sight, and the whole party, somewhat elated, commenced talking about William Tell, when one of the party, by name Horace H. Wadsworth, remarked that he was as good a shot as ever Tell was, and said he, 'fired me a man and I'll prove it,' whereupon Alonzo Grogan stepped forward and said, 'I'm the man for you to practice upon.' 'Very well,' said W., 'get an apple and I'll try.' Search was made for an apple, but not finding one readily a potato was substituted, and the crowd adjourned from the bar-room to the yard adjoining the barn.

"Measure off twenty paces," said Wadsworth. "The distance was paced. Grogan took his place, with cap off and potato on his head, when Wadsworth deliberately raised his rifle, drew a fine shot on the potato, and discharged his piece at arms length! No one expected that he would do it, and for a moment consternation was depicted on the countenance of all the bystanders, until Grogan, putting his hand on his head, said in an agonizing tone, 'Am I dead? Is there any blood?'"

It was found that Grogan was not dead, but that the potato had been cut in twain, and that no blood had been drawn, though a ridge about the size of a person's finger had been raised on the top of his head by the force of the ball.

Grogan, who did not think that Wadsworth would fire, was seriously alarmed for a few minutes afterward, as he believed that his skull was split. He says that if any smart shots want to practice shooting potatoes off a person's head, they must find some one besides him to be their target.

A GOOD PRACTICAL JOKE.—An English paper tells a story of a scientific lecturer, whose popular discourses on medicine and the various sciences therewith connected had given offence to the more "orthodox" members of the profession. A couple of embryos M. D.'s resolved upon testing his medical skill.

They accordingly called upon him, and one of them, a fine healthy young man, with a rosy eye, complained of certain pains in the chest, a cough, night sweats, &c. The Doctor heard his tale, asked a number of questions, and after a long diagnosis, declared him to be in a deep consumption. This was just what was wanted, and the young gent could hardly control his mirth while Dr. Mill wrote his prescription, sealed it up in an envelope, and directed it to one of our first chemists, pocketed his fee, and bowed them out of the room. To the chemist they rushed to enjoy the pent-up laugh, and handing him the note, he read: "This young man is suffering from verruca hernia in the region marked 'self-test' by phrenologists. Pray, therefore, give him common sense, it grains wit, I drachm; horseplay, ad libitum—J. M." We hardly expect the Doctor will get another professional patient here.

HOW TO DETERMINE THE HEIGHT A COIT WILL ATTAIN WHEN FULL GROWN.—Mr. J. R. Martin, of Lexington, Ky., gives out the following upon this point: "I can tell you how any man may know, within half an inch, the height a coit will attain when full grown. The rule may not hold good in every instance, but in nine cases out of ten it will. When the coit gets to be three weeks old, or as soon as it is perfectly straightened in its limbs, measure from the edge of the hair on the hoofs to the middle of the first joint, and for every inch, it will grow to the height of a hand, or four inches, when it is matured. Thus, if this distance be found sixteen inches, it will make a horse sixteen hands high. By this means a man may know something of what sort of a horse, with proper care, is to expect from his coit. Three years ago I bought two very shabby looking colts for twenty dollars each, and sold them recently for $200. So much for knowing how to guess properly at a coit."

ACCOMMODATION FOR THE LADIES IN THE CAPITOL.—The following will be among the accommodations for the ladies at the Capitol, in the extension now in progress: "The ladies have a spacious and elegant receiving room, and a private room approached only through the receiving room, in each wing. The private room will be fitted up with the most approved and permanent washstands, &c., the pipes for which are already laid. There will be private entrances into the galleries from the receiving room, so that ladies may go unattended, without fear of molestation. Every thing has been done for the comfort and convenience of lady visitors to the Capitol that human ingenuity could suggest. All the rooms will be warmed by hot water furnaces, well ventilated by artificial means, and brilliantly lighted with gas."

LORD SEAFORTH, who was born deaf and dumb, was to dine one day with Lord Melbourne. Just before the time of the company's arrival, Lady Melbourne sent into the drawing room a lady of her acquaintance who could talk with her fingers to dumb people, that she might receive Lord Seaforth. Presently Lord Guilford entered the room, and the lady, taking him for Lord Seaforth, began to ply her fingers very nimbly. Lord Guilford did the same, and they had been carrying on a conversation in this manner for about ten minutes, when Lady Melbourne joined them. Her friend immediately said, "Well, I have been talking away to this dumb man." "Dumb!" cried Lord Guilford, "bless me, I thought you were dumb."

Those who have worn down their teeth masticating tough beef will be pleased to learn that carbonate of soda will be found a remedy for the evil. Cut your steak the day before into slices two inches thick, rub them over with a small quantity of soda, wash off next morning, cut it into suitable thickness, and cook as you choose. The same process will answer for fowls, legs of mutton, &c. Try it, all who love delicious tender dishes of meat.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION.—Benison Blake, esq., informed us yesterday that fire burst out of the centre of a pile of cotton seed that lay by the side of his gin house, on his plantation on the Yazoo river, a few days since. The cotton seed had been exposed to the weather all winter, and he had commenced hauling it away, when the fire broke out in the pile. After it was extinguished, on examination it was found charred to a considerable depth, and bore the appearance of having been smothered in for some time. Mr. Blake assures us there can be no doubt of the fire originating from the heat of the seed. No doubt this is the cause of many gins burning down; and we would advise all who have piles of cotton seed lying about their gins to haul it out forthwith.—Vicksburg Whig, 26th ult.

It is believed that coffee can be cultivated in some of our Southern States as successfully as in Brazil, Java, and Jamaica. That its cultivation in our country would be invaluable may be inferred from the fact that it costs us no less than $15,700,000 annually as an importation. The coffee tree, it is well known, lives to a great age, provided the soil is kept well drained, and begins to bear when three years old, increasing in fruitfulness till seven years of age. It is to be hoped that the experiment will speedily be tried in some of our Southern States.

Archbishop Usher was, in his younger days, wrecked on the coast of Ireland, at a place where his person and character were alike unknown. Stripped of everything, he wandered to the house of a dignitary of the church in search of shelter and relief, craving assistance as a brother clergyman. The dignitary of the church, struck with his squalid appearance after the wreck, distrusted his tale, and doubted his character, and said that, so far from being a clergyman, he did not believe he could tell him how many commandments there were. "I can at once satisfy you," said the archbishop, "that I am not the ignorant impostor you take me for. There are eleven commandments." This answer confirmed the dignitary in his suspicions, and he replied with a sneer, "Indeed, there are but ten commandments in my Bible—tell me the eleventh, and I will relieve you." "Here it is," said the archbishop—"A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another."

HAVING A HARD TIME OF IT.—Mr. Gillman, of Boston, from whose lectures on Yankee humor we have already copied some good things, at one of his late gatherings introduced a capital story. A clergyman in Boston, meeting with one of his congregation who recently came into possession of quite a handsome property by the death of his brother, inquired how he was getting along with the settlement of the estate. "Oh," said he, "I am having a dreadful time, what with getting out letters of administration, and attending probate court, and settling claims, I sometimes almost wish he hadn't died."—New Orleans Picayune.

APOLITON OF CHURCH RATES.—The English papers notice a motion made by Sir W. Clay, in the House of Commons, to abolish church rates, and to make other provisions in lieu thereof. The bill abolishes all church rates in England and Wales, and empowers church wardens to collect voluntary contributions for the purposes of the parish churches. Were this measure to be adopted it would work an immediate and great change in church affairs in England, for it is nothing less than the American voluntary system, upon the policy of which the British churchmen have been so long debating.

ANOTHER ALLEGED CURE FOR HYDROPHOBIA.—M. Guerin Menerville lately brought before the French Academy of Sciences a means of curing hydrophobia, which he stated is practiced in Russia with success. A little insect, the golden cetonides, found in considerable quantities on rose trees, is proved, when pounded to a powder, and administered internally, to produce a profound sleep, which sometimes lasts for thirty-six hours, and which has the effect, in many cases, of completely nullifying the hydrophobic affection. A distinguished entomologist of Russia, M. Melschowski, has tried several experiments with this insect, and in most cases with success.

IN THE AMERICAN BIBLE UNION'S revised version of the Book of Job, by Rev. Dr. Conant, occurs an alteration which has been severely censured. The verse is 2. 9. "Then said his wife to him: Dost thou hold fast thy integrity? Bless God, and die!" The common English Bible has, "Curse God, and die!" Dr. Conant shows that the most distinguished scholar in Hebrew, Gesenius, gives this same translation. The intent of Job's wife, then, was, according to Dr. C., to make a better, taunting reproach, for what she deemed his groundless and fruitless trust in Providence. It was as if she had said, with the tone of maddened sarcasm, "Bless God, (if you will), and die; for that is all you will gain by it!"

MARY VS. CLARENCE.—The Yankees say "Lord Clarence is talking rather strong." But don't let's fight, it's much the best to let the Lord have Mary's. During a debate in the Senate lately on the war question, an opposition Senator said Gen. Cass was bellicose. On this view of the question, Gen. Cass made some lengthy remarks, and in the heat of his excitement ventured a pun upon his own graceful figure, for you know the General is very corpulent. "Yes," said the distinguished Michiganier, "the gentleman from Tennessee speaks of me as being belly-ose, sir—the Senator's language, not mine, sir! Yet I take the liberty of assuring, knocking down at his vast corporeity, of assuring him, sir, that he is mistaken. (Great laughter.)

"Crow, I want to do as you a commandment." "Well, Julius, succeed; 'X' open for the question." "Can you tell me why the art of self-defense and like a rubber at low tide?" "No, Julius, I don't see no similarity in de two subjects so darfo, I gives it up!" "Well, den, I'll tell you. It is simply because it develops de muscles! You is the most ignominious nigger I never seed!"

FOSSIL HEAD.—A singular fossil was discovered some time since in Pompey, Onondago county, New York, in the shape of the profile of a man's head and shoulders, perfectly formed, with mouth, nose, eye, &c. It is described as "about the size of a peck measure," the lower part of limestone, and the upper portion of some other stone rather darker in hue.

HOMES is emphatically the poor man's paradise. The rich, with their many resources, too often live away from the hearthstone, in heart, if not in person; but to the virtuous poor, domestic ties are the only legitimate and positive sources of happiness short of that holier heaven which is the soul's home.

There is a man hereabouts who is so strongly opposed to foreigners that he will not eat Irish potatoes. He is so keen, probably, to the man who, although opposed to foreigners, is quite fond of French brandy.—North Carolinian. It is not uncommon, says Broomsticks, for a traveller who is lionized to be obliged, in order to keep up his distinction, to tell whopping stories; that is, in short, once a Lion always a lion.

When Lord Eskine heard that somebody had died two hundred thousand pounds, he observed, "Well, that's a pretty sum to begin the next world with."

A red-headed lover, in writing to a red-headed girl, should take great care in writing his letters. The less said about "muddled heads" the better.

An Irishman, giving testimony in court, in a riot case, said "The first man I saw coming at me when I got up was two brick bats."

MAD HORSE.—A few days since Mr. Hannan, of our city, observed his horse, a very fine animal, acting strangely. He would lay hold of everything within his reach with his teeth, and shake it savagely, much as a rat terror worries his victim. While the gentleman was watching him, the animal reached into a pig pen that stood adjacent to the lot where he was confined, and laying hold of a good sized six months old pig threw it up into the air. This feat he repeated, and then setting his teeth into the body of the pig crushed it into the earth, gnawing and mangleing it frightfully. The horse then took a second pig and treated it in a similar manner, and then a large two months old calf, which he tossed into the air as lightly as a cat would a mouse. The owner, in the mean time, had sent for Mr. Charles Streuver. When he arrived the horse was somewhat quieted, and Mr. Hannan ventured inside the inclosure and called the horse to him. The animal came up quietly, but as soon as he was near enough caught Mr. Hannan by the shoulder and threw him violently to the ground, face downward, and then setting his teeth in his back, crushed, gnawed and shook him, while his eyes were glassy with rage.

The imminent peril of Mr. Hannan roused Mr. Streuver to instant exertion; he sprang on the fence, pulled off a rail, and succeeded in knocking the animal down, but not until Mr. Hannan was horribly bruised. The animal was then shot. Mr. Hannan will not be affected with the virus, inasmuch as the teeth of the horse did not penetrate the clothing, and consequently did not lacerate but bruised the flesh. He is not supposed to be fatally injured.
